

REBEKAH MANCINO

BIOGRAPHY

Rebekah Mancino is a classically trained trumpet player from London England, currently residing in Ohio USA.

Growing up in an environment rich with but limited to sacred and classical music, her younger days were preoccupied in the pursuit of a musical career, highlighted with being awarded places to study at the exclusive Purcell School for young musicians and London's Royal Academy of Music.

In addition to the trumpet, she is also an accomplished performer on the piano, flute, and bassoon. She has performed in concerts for the former Prince of Wales (now, HRH King Charles III) at Windsor Castle, Buckingham Palace, and St. John Smith Square in London; and under the leadership of conductors such as Sir Simon Rattle and Sir Roger Norrington.

She has performed on the trumpet and cornet in various solo, orchestral, and brass band concerts across the UK.

Notable piano performances have been as the featured soloist in Gershwin's 'Rhapsody in Blue' and Shostakovich's 'Piano Concerto No. 2'.

She relocated from London to her parent's native USA where she had previously toured extensively, and played with the Cleveland Women's Orchestra and other local small ensembles, before embarking on her journey as a solo artist.
